    court at 12:00 p.m.)
2
                THE CLERK: 1:10 civil 1418, Ronald F.
3 Federici versus Monica Pignotti, et al.
4
                Would counsel please come forward and state 5 your appearances for the record.
 6
7
                MR. RIVERA: Good morning, Your Honor.
    Domingo Rivera for plaintiff, Ronald Federici.
8
                THE COURT: Good morning.
                MS. BAGLEY: Good morning, Your Honor.
10
             I'm here on behalf of ACT, Charly Miller, Larry 11 Sarner and Linda Rosa.
12
                THE COURT: Good afternoon. It's now 12:01.
13
                MS. ZECH: Good afternoon, Your Honor.
14
    Kristen Zech of Cochran and Owen.
                                        I'm here on behalf of 15 defendants, Jean Mercer and Monica Pignotti.
16
                THE COURT: Pronounce your name one more time 17 for me.
18
                            Kristen Zech.
                MS. ZECH:
19
                THE COURT: Z-E-C-K?
20
                MS. ZECH: Z-E-C-H, Your Honor.
21
                THE COURT: Thank you. I'm ready.
22
                MS. BAGLEY: Your Honor, good morning or good 23 afternoon as it is now.
24
                As I stated, I'm here of behalf of ACT,

Mr. Sarner and Mrs. Rosa and Miller. 1 This case is, from our position baseless, but 2 more importantly, it's in the wrong place. 3 defendants have zero contact with this jurisdiction. 4 THE COURT: So what is the issue? 5 MS. BAGLEY: There is no personal 6 7 jurisdiction over those defendants in this court, and additionally service has not been properly made because 8 the Long-Arm Statute is not satisfied, and therefore the method of service attempted by the defendant is 10 deficient. 11 There is simply no contact to support a tort 12 being comitted by my clients within the jurisdiction. 13 THE COURT: This is a case involving postings 14 on the Internet of information allegedly about 15 Mr. Federici; is that right? 16 MS. BAGLEY: That's correct, Your Honor. 17 THE COURT: What acts, if any, demonstrate 18 purposeful availment of Virginia law by your clients? 19 MS. BAGLEY: Your Honor, I would argue that 20 there are no acts that demonstrate a purposeful 21 availment. 22 Their goal is actually to communicate on a 23 much broader level to anybody who has access and interest 24 in these issues. They do not advertise to, you know, 2.5

Virginia consumers. They do not seek out subscribers or donations. They do not run advertisements for their 2 website in Virginia publications. They don't perform 3 interviews in the state.

 4
                THE COURT: Well, Virginia residents can 5 access the Internet and read those postings, can't they?
 6
7 MS. BAGLEY: Certainly they can, but so could anyone anywhere, which is the beauty, in a way, of the 8
    Internet is that it's an easy way to access everyone.
                And as the Young case that actually was not 10 cited in my brief, Your Honor, but was cited in the 11 co-defendant's brief, Young v. New Haven, it's a great 12 case on point -- 13
                THE COURT: Is that the case involving the 14 warden in Virginia?
15
                MS. BAGLEY: It is, Your Honor.
16
                THE COURT: And the newspapers in New Haven 17 publishing information about the jail?
18
                MS. BAGLEY:
                              They were. And they, obvious, 19 you know, had jurisdiction and published a paper in New 20
            But their Internet postings, just like the 21 Haven.
    Washington Post or anything else, is accessible by people 22 anywhere.
23
                It does not make people that read the Post in 24 California -- you know, suddenly the Washington Post has, you know, personal jurisdiction out there in California. 1 The same thing is true here. Without 2 demonstrating that they reached out to Virginia, that 3 they had some particularized interest in this state and 4 tried to establish, you know, stream of communication or 5 a stream of commerce, there's nothing that targeted this 6 forum. Rather --7 THE COURT: Well, what about that Jones case 8 in California where the person was writing an article 9 about this -- I guess it was an actress or actor who 10 lived in California, and the publication I think was the 11 National Inquirer or some other --12 MS. BAGLEY: Well, they've been right about a 13 few things recently, so I wouldn't want to dismiss them. 14 But the significant difference here is, with 15 this particular case, with Dr. Federici --16 THE COURT: There was no Internet back then, 17 was there? 18 MS. BAGLEY: Well, no. Maybe Al Gore can 19 better attest to that, but no. 20 All right. Well, that would be a THE COURT: 21 distinction between Calder versus Jones and this case and 22 that is in that case you're talking about a newspaper 23 publication in California about an actress in California 24 and it's distinct from somebody publishing something on the Internet.
25

2.5

1.3

MS. BAGLEY: Exactly. I mean I think it's significantly distinguished, well, for several reasons.

They're not targeting -- they knew that she was there and that she lived there and that potentially would impact her reputation there.

Conversely, my clients are trying to communicate to anyone anywhere on these types of information.

The fact that this one doctor of many who they addressed happens to be located here does not mean that he is their target. It does not mean that that's their target audience. It means that's where he happens to be. He could move to another state.

You know, I'm also not implying, Your Honor, that my clients are somehow above the law simply because they communicate via the Internet.

There is obviously personal jurisdiction that exists over them where they act. So, you know, by posting on the Internet, they're not placing themselves outside of civil torts.

THE COURT: Well, can you tell from this complaint what defendant did what?

MS. BAGLEY: Exactly. I mean this is exactly the problem, Your Honor. How could --

```
THE COURT: What is the problem?
1
                MS. BAGLEY: The problem is that we have, on 2
    the jurisdictional point -- and to be clear, Your Honor, 3 we're here today, you know, primarily on the 4 jurisdictional point.
5
                How can we even tell what acts would 6 7 theoretically underlie jurisdiction since repeatedly all the complaint says is defendants, defendants. Defendants 8 admitted this act. Defendants said these items. You need to point to at least one act per witness.
10
                THE COURT: Well, I think that I understand 11 your position. Let me hear from plaintiff's counsel.
12
                           Excuse me, Your Honor, just a MS. ZECH:
13 moment. May I speak on behalf of the defendants 14 before -- 15
                THE COURT: Yes.
16
                MS. ZECH: -- unless the Court -- 17
                THE COURT: Yes, you can. Come on up, 18
    Ms. Zech.
19
                           Thank you, Your Honor. And I
                MS. ZECH:
20 apologize for interrupting.
21
                THE COURT: Oh, you're not interrupting.
22 think the issues are the same in both cases, aren't they?
23
                MS. ZECH:
                           They are, Your Honor. In this 24 particular case, defendants Mercer and Pignotti have also 25

raised 12(b)(6) defenses, and if the Court would like to 1 briefly address those, I will add those in. 2 THE COURT: Sure, go ahead. 3 MS. ZECH: Just to speak very briefly on the 4 jurisdictional issue as to my defendants, the defendants 5 that I'm here on behalf of, neither of these defendants 6 are advertising in Virginia. They are both academics. 7 Dr. Mercer is a professor emerita in New 8 She does not teach in Virginia. She has never 9 taught in Virginia. 10 Dr. Pignotti resides in Florida. She does 11 not work in Virginia. She has never worked in Virginia. 12 Under the circumstances their only contact at 13 least as plaintiff alleges with Virginia is the fact that 14 there were Internet postings. 15 And I would commend the case of Mealer versus 16 GMAC which is out of the District Court of Arizona but is 17 very similar in this case for the Court's consideration. 18 And what the Court said there is if putting 19 something on the Internet, and we adopt that theory, then 20 somebody is subject to jurisdiction anywhere, and that 21 simply can't be the case. 22 Your Honor, and I'm happy to address any 23 concerns the Court may have as to the jurisdictional 24 issue without going further on that. 2.5

2.5

THE COURT: I do. Well, plaintiff says that they sufficiently allege interference with contract because two appointments were canceled by potential patients who said they canceled them because of things they read on the Internet.

Would that be sufficient to state a claim for tortious interference with contract for business expectancy?

MS. ZECH: Your Honor, we would submit that it's not. First of all, I think there is some inconsistency as to what's being alleged.

There are appointments noted for a very limited period of time, I believe a week, and another random appointment out there. We don't know whether those were contracts that had been entered into, whether they were expectancies.

It's just too vague, Your Honor, in our perspective to actually assert a claim for tortious interference with contract.

We have a total of $300,000 and, you know, I'm not expecting plaintiffs to itemize contract by contract, but there's no name. There's no indication of what's going on in connection with these tortious interference claims. There is no specificity at the end of the day.

THE COURT: Well, Dr. Pignotti also 1 challenges the allegations of libel, and I think I have 2 up here one of these exhibits where she is talking about 3 Dr. Federici contacting her via the school. 4 MS. ZECH: That's correct, Your Honor. 5 THE COURT: Does she appear to be responding 6 7 to something that she says that Mr. Federici did? Yes, Your Honor. And I believe MS. ZECH: 8 what becomes clear in looking at the statements that were 9 allegedly made of which plaintiffs complain is they can 10 be really divided into three categories. And this is 11 just speaking to Dr. Pignotti. 12 THE COURT: This is Exhibit H. 13 MS. ZECH: Yes, that's correct. And just for 14 the record, Your Honor, Dr. Mercer, there's nothing in 15 the complaint that connects Dr. Mercer to any of these 16 statements. And for that reason we don't see any --17 THE COURT: There's no allegation that 18 Dr. Mercer did anything. 19 MS. ZECH: That's correct. 20 THE COURT: Other than she's listed as a 21 defendant. 22 Correct. And if the Court should MS. ZECH: 23 proceed pass the issue of personal jurisdiction which we 24 again submit has not been satisfied here, we would ask 2.5

that the case be completely dismissed as to Dr. Mercer.

As to Dr. Pignotti, all four of the postings that have been attributed to Dr. Pignotti we think can be divided into three categories, statements in which she is responding to personal accusations, which certainly she is able to do. She has the ability to defend her character and reputation. And that was similar to the Schnare case which is out of the Fourth Circuit and cited in our brief.

The second is really her comments and her opinions on the therapeutic methods that are advocated by Dr. Federici as well as other practitioners who are advocating similar methods.

THE COURT: So if someone criticizes someone's method of treatment, that does not necessarily constitute libel?

MS. ZECH: Correct, Your Honor. And I would refer the Court to Arthur versus Offit which is actually out of this very court. And what the Court basically said -- and that was a case involving the mandatory vaccination of children. This is an academic debate. This is not an issue for the Court to resolve.

There are differences of opinion, but that's an academic debate. That is not an issue that should be before the Court, and that's a similar ruling in the Schnare case which involved the breed standards for Labrador retrievers.

And then the third category of documents, I'm sorry, statements that Dr. Pignotti's postings can be categorized into are really statements where she's commenting upon the process that has occurred.

As the Court can see from the postings and the prior pleadings in this case, there has been some interaction between the two camps on this issue for a period of time here. Dr. Pignotti's simply commenting upon that.

Again --

2.5

THE COURT: Well, is Mr. Federici a public figure?

MS. ZECH: Your Honor, we would assert that he is. The way that he has touted himself not only in his pleading as is clear to the Court in terms of him being internationally renown, but also a very quick visit to his website demonstrates that he is traveling around the world, that he is speaking throughout the United States and abroad.

His most recent -- well, I shouldn't say most recent, but his post in January of 2011 on his own blog indicated that he is now traveling now around the country to treat children in their own homes.

A brief search on Lexus revealed two cases. not only the Salvetti case where he was treating an individual from North Carolina but also a case out of New Hampshire where the family actually traveled to Virginia to be treated by Dr. Federici. Your Honor, this also goes to the Court's earlier point about whether Virginia was the targeted focus of any actions of these --THE COURT: My intentions was not activity expressly aimed at Virginia. MS. ZECH: Correct. THE COURT: And I think the Care First case and there are other Fourth Circuit cases like the New Hampshire case that say that posting someone on the Internet in and of itself is not sufficient. MS. ZECH: Correct, Your Honor, we agree. And we believe that the circumstances here demonstrate that Dr. Federici has -- does not have just the Virginia audience as he has maintained but that his audience is much more widespread, both domestically and abroad. THE COURT: Hold on just one second. MS. ZECH: Certainly, Your Honor. THE COURT: I've asked you the questions that I want to ask Ms. Bagley additional questions. I have. Thank you, Your Honor. MS. ZECH:

```
THE COURT: Yes, I want to ask Ms. Bagley a 1 question.
2
                 I have a transcript here from the General
3 District Court in Fairfax. Were you involved in that 4 case?
5
                MS. BAGLEY: I was not, Your Honor.
 6
                THE COURT: Was -- were any of your clients 7 present or represented in that case?
8
                MS. BAGLEY: ACT -- to be clear, the three defendants in the General District Court matter were ACT.
10
    Charly Miller and Ms. Mercer.
11
                May I invite Ms. Zech to correct me if that's 12 inaccurate.
13
                MS. ZECH:
                           That is correct, Your Honor.
14
                If I may, Ms. Bagley, Ms. Mercer did appear 15 and she was present at that time.
16
                THE COURT: Right.
17
                MS. BAGLEY: Now, with regard to ACT and 18
    Ms. Miller, both of them filed special appearances 19 challenging jurisdiction with the Court.
20
                Ms. Miller filed a request for a continuance 21 and a challenge to jurisdiction. There's a portion in 22
    the transcript where the General District Court judge 23 acknowledged I've received that. I'll take it under 24 advertisement. And then ultimately he granted favor -- 2.5
```

```
judgment in favor of all the defendants in that matter 1 effectively -- 2
                THE COURT: So what happened to the motion to 3 challenge jurisdiction?
4
                 MS. BAGLEY: Well, ACT filed a demur 5 challenge -- filed a special appearance to challenge
 6 7 jurisdiction.
                Ms. Mercer appeared, and as the transcript 8 sort of unfold you can see that the General District 9
    Court judge just sort of dove into things and started 10 taking testimony on the matter, although he had stated 11 early on, here's how we will do this. I'll hear your 12 motions, I'll hear your motions, then we'll get going.
13
    Then he sort of plowed right in.
14
                 Ms. Mercer at the end did attempt to point 15 out to the judge, Your Honor, I had intended to argue 16 jurisdiction. He said, well, I'm going to rule in your 17 favor anyway.
                   That's that.
18
                My position on it, Your Honor, is that none 19 of that matters. I mean, I'll be honest with you.
20
                 THE COURT: What happens with the Fairfax 21
    Circuit Court of Appeal? Was it appealed?
22
                MS. BAGLEY:
                              It was appealed and the appeal
23 was nonsuited, and the nonsuit re-filing period expired 24 on the second of this month, so two days ago.
2.5

2.5

So our position is -- and I have case law to support this -- that that entire action is a nullity. The General District Court transcript and the rulings there were appealed de novo. So we would have had a whole new trial.

We would have again -- we did file -- ACT and Ms. Miller did file special appearance via demurrer to challenge jurisdiction, and that's where that case was at when it was nonsuited, not refiled. It makes the entire matter a nullity.

So I don't believe there's been any waiver as to our personal jurisdiction argument or that there's been any dispositive ruling that would in anyway bind this Court.

THE COURT: All right, thank you.

I'm ready now, Mr. Rivera.

MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor. Your Honor, was concerned about purpose of availment of Virginia as a forum. Well this defendant, although they say they're just giving out general information, that does not appear to be true.

Looking just at the first exhibit in the complaint, the term "Virginia" appears at least 89 times. And, it appears significantly more. There's hardly any other states that's even mentioned other than Virginia.

```
THE COURT: Well, Dr. Federici's practice is 1 based here in Virginia; is that right?
2
                MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor. His practice 3 is based here.
 4
                THE COURT: Well, help me with your view.
                                                             Is
    it sufficient if someone posts on the Internet comments 6 or criticism of Dr. Federici knowing that he practices in 7
    Virginia, is that expressly aiming activity at Virginia?
8
                MR. RIVERA: That is part of what is considered.
                 I think we have more than that here.
10
                We also have a defendant that actually 11 registered a domain name through a company based in 12 Virginia.
               That is Network Solutions, also utilized 13
    Network Solutions services which has an agreement that 14 says that any disputes that come from the use of that 15 domain name, which is what we have in this case, are to 16 be resolved in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern 17 District of Virginia in Alexandria.
18
                THE COURT: Network Solutions is not a party 19 to this case, are they?
20
                MR. RIVERA: No, Your Honor, but they have 21 agreed to be bound to Virginia if there is any dispute, 22 not only with Network Solutions. It says any disputes.
23
    It says something about third party complaints, also, 24 that need to be addressed in the -- in either Alexandria
2.5
```

```
or where the party resides. But Alexandria is obviously 1 given there. They agreed to that.
2
                They have used the Network Solutions -- 3
                THE COURT: So, under your view of the 4 Network Solutions' domain name registration contract, any 5 party who has a domain name registered with Network 6 Solutions and they have a dispute with a third party of 7 any kind, they could bring it into federal court in 8 Virginia?
                MR. RIVERA: Not by itself, Your Honor.
10 think it's part of the -- since the Court is looking at 11
    the fairness of the entire situation -- 12
                THE COURT: I'm not looking at the fairness.
13
    I'm looking at personal jurisdiction under the Long-Arm 14 Statute.
15
                I'm trying to -- if your basis is they had a 16 contract or doing business in Virginia, that's one thing.
17
    But you agree they're not doing business here; is that 18 right?
19
                MR. RIVERA:
                              That is correct, Your Honor.
20
                THE COURT: Well, help me with your theory 21 that posting criticism of Dr. Federici on the Internet is 22 an availment of Virginia law or expressly aiming activity 23 at Virginia. Help me with that.
24
                MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor.
25
```

```
Number one, they have, like I mentioned 1 Virginia many times which is no surprise that they would 2 be hailed to court here.
3
                They have also solicited people actively.
 4
    They have provided information on how to file complaint 5 against Dr. Federici with Virginia Board.
 6
7 They have also indicated that they have been researching Dr. Federici's qualifications, and they don't 8 believe he's even a doctor at all.
                They have provided clear content that they 10 knew would be targeted and that would have its effect 11 mostly in Virginia.
12
                Dr. Federici, he did as counsel indicated.
13
    He has handled cases outside Virginia. That is a very 14 small part of his practice. He is a Virginia -- 15
                THE COURT: Well, does he have a website, 16 too?
17
                MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor.
18
                THE COURT: And does he post on that website 19 information about his practice and his ways of treating 20 children?
               Is that on his website?
21
                MR. RIVERA: I do not know the answer to 22 that.
23
                THE COURT: Have you looked at his website?
24
                MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor, I have.
2.5
```

```
THE COURT: All right. Well, is he 1 presenting himself there as an expert of some kind in the 2 treatment of children?
3
                MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor.
 4
                 THE COURT: Then, why wouldn't he be a public 5
             He hands himself out to the whole world on the 6
    Internet as some kind of an expert. Why wouldn't he be a 7 public figure?
8
                MR. RIVERA: He might be a limited public figure where it relates exactly to what his posting on 10 his website and what he's telling the world his practice 11 is about.
12
                The issue here -- 13 Hasn't he been on television and
                THE COURT:
14 in the news as well?
15
                MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor. Yes, Your 16 Honor.
17
                THE COURT: Well, how much time does he have 18 to spend on television and in the news to become a public 19 figure, Mr. Rivera?
20
                MR. RIVERA: He would -- to answer that 21 direct answer to -- 22
                THE COURT: I would like a direct answer if 23 you would give me one.
24
                MR. RIVERA: I wouldn't know how to quantify
2.5
```

```
if one appearance is enough or many.
1
                THE COURT: He's had more than one.
2
                MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor. He's had more 3 than the average person.
                              So -- 4
                THE COURT: Well, if I accept he's a public 5 figure, then the standard on libel and slander is 6 different, isn't it?
7
                MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor. I do believe 8 that we can also meet the standard of malice, although in 9 this case given this individual is not only on the 10
    Internet. They actually have called and made complaints 11 about Dr. Federici to the board of -- Dr. Federici's 12 licensed with the Board of Psychology, and they have even 1.3
    called and made complaints that Dr. Federici assisted in 14 the -- in the killing of a child. And they have actually 15 not only put this online, they have actually reached out 16 to the Virginia Board to actually make the same false 17 complaints. All of them obviously have been -- 18
                THE COURT: Well, this is not a lawsuit about 19
    the false complaint, not yet. It is defamation, tortious 20 interference with contract, tortious interference with 21 business expectations and conspiracy. There is no 22 allegation of making false complaints to Virginia 23 authorities, is there?
24
                MR. RIVERA: No. Your Honor.
2.5

2.5

THE COURT: All right. Help me then with the issue of the tortious interference with contract rights and business expectancy here. What you've alleged is basically that two clients -- potential clients canceled because of things on the Internet.

MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You don't focus on Dr. Pignotti or Mercer or ACT, do you?

MR. RIVERA: Well, Your Honor, all the -- all this negative things comes from these defendants. They are tied together to this organization called ACT. We doesn't know who is a member. We got one defendant who appeared to be a member and represented being a member then they go and file an affidavit in this court saying I'm not a member. I have nothing to do with it.

Then we have counsel asking for the charges to be -- for the case to be dismissed based on the corporation cannot conspire with itself. But at the same time, one of those people is saying I'm not a member of the corporation. So, then they can conspire with this person.

THE COURT: Well, that brings up another point that I wanted to bring to your attention and that is that as I read your complaint, there are numerous references to defendants, plural, but there's no specification of acts by individual defendants.

That makes it very difficult for us to determine what your claim is against an individual defendant. And with respect to libel and slander, we would need what the exact words were and when they were made because there's a statute limitation of one year, is that right, one year statute of limitation?

MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: So we can't tell when these statements were made and what statements you think were made by ACT or made by Dr. Mercer or Pignotti.

MR. RIVERA: Well, Your Honor, the majority of these websites are controlled by the defendants. So they are the one who have the information such as IP addresses, who made the comments.

THE COURT: Let me make sure you understand what I'm saying here. I think that your complaint suffers from what I would call group pleading. All the allegations say defendants, plural. It does not specify what a particular defendant did, said, that you claim was libelous and when the statement was made which I think is a pleading requirement under Virginia law for libel or slander. Do you see what I'm trying to tell you?

MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor. And the reason they are grouped together is that they are kind of one big operation. They are not just each individual standing alone. We know that the websites are controlled by members of ACT. That's kind of a loose term.

But looking at Ms. Mercer who appeared in the General District Court, she referred that -- and on the transcript shows that ACT, that's me, and I am such and such. We have another one who has this occupation. We have another one who has this occupation.

So, part of the issue here is that the defendants themselves have worked as a unit somewhat disguising each individual part of that unit.

Now, that will bear out in discovery if something is on the ACT website.

THE COURT: Well, I'm not going to let you go but so far with this if we can't figure out who has made what statements, at least some idea of what statements you say are libelous.

Now, what allegations do you have about what Dr. Mercer did? How could I tell what Dr. Mercer did from your complaint?

MR. RIVERA: Yes. Dr. Mercer has indicated that she made admissions even at the General District Court that she was a member of ACT and that she has authored some posts regarding to what she refers as information she wants the public to know about Dr.

Federici. So she has a --1 THE COURT: I understand that. But just to 2 say, well, she's criticized Dr. Federici in general is 3 too broad for me to figure out just what allegation you 4 say is libelous, I mean, because criticism is allowed. You can criticize somebody on the Internet, can't you? 6 7 MR. RIVERA: Yes, Your Honor. And we're not referring to any criticisms. We're actually referring to 8 factual statements that can be verified. Either Dr. Federici is licensed or he's not. Either he assisted in 10 the killing of a child or he did not. 11 THE COURT: Well, when I see those 12 allegations set forth in a separate paragraph with a date 13 and time and a speaker, I'll be able to address that. 14 I think I've asked you the questions I have. 15 What -- your theory of conspiracy is that 16 they all criticized Dr. Federici, so they were all 17 working together. Is that your theory of the conspiracy? 18 It's a little bit more than MR. RIVERA: 19 that, Your Honor. It's planned criticism. The only 20 thing they have in common is that they criticize Dr. 21 Federici, and they do it as a unit and they talk to each 22 other and plan these attacks as opposed to just people 23 who happen to criticize him. 24 They know each other. They claim to belong 2.5

to the same organization. They claim to share ideas and 1 they talk to each other frequently and plan what they're 2 going to do against different people. 3 There was another case in Texas where they 4 did the same thing to another doctor and a judgment was 5 entered in favor of that doctor there. 6 7 THE COURT: All right. I've asked you the questions that I have and I have read the briefs that 8 have been submitted. Thank you. MR. RIVERA: Thank you, Your Honor. 10 MS. ZECH: Your Honor, may I make a few quick 11 responses to that? 12 THE COURT: You could but I'm prepared to 13 rule now. 14 MS. ZECH: Thank you, Your Honor. 15 THE COURT: Thank you. 16 This matter is before the Court on the 17 defendant's motion to dismiss the complaint, and the 18 record should reflect that the motion's made by the 19 defendant ACT, Miller, Sarner, Linda Rosa, Dr. Jean 20 Mercer and Dr. Monica Pignotti. 21 These all deal with a complaint filed by Dr. 22 Ronald Federici against these individuals for matters 23 that Dr. Federici asserts were posted about him in 24 criticizing him and his ideas about treatment of children 2.5

on the Internet. And that as plaintiff's counsel's pointed out, there are numerous reference to Dr. Federici being in Virginia, practicing in Virginia and Virginia authorities not taking any action against him for techniques that they have criticized on the Internet.

And, the question presented is whether or not the plaintiff has shown that there's personal jurisdiction against these defendants in Virginia.

I think the precise issue was whether the Court should dismiss the complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction because the plaintiff cannot show that these postings on the Internet were expressly aimed at Virginia, and they were not the focal point of any tortious activity under the effects test.

Let me say at the outset that the complaint suffers from several deficiencies. The first is group pleading, and we really can't tell what allegations are made against each individual defendant. And that is a problem that the whole complaint suffers from.

And because of that, it is really not clear what the plaintiff asserts each defendant did and when and what false statements were made that are libelous, what was the statement, what was the date of it.

And even if we go beyond that, the question is a matter of what express -- what activity expressly aimed these matters at Virginia.

2.5

In dealing with personal jurisdiction, I have to look at the Long-Arm Statute under 8.01328.1. And we're dealing with electronic communications. We have to look at whether an out-of-state citizen has intentionally entered the state through the Internet.

And the Fourth Circuit has adopted the Zippo Manufacturing test which both parties have briefed, and I'll cite the ALS Scan versus Digital Service Consultants case which sets forth the standard.

And, the Fourth Circuit in that case looked at Calder versus Jones having to do with whether or not a California court had personal jurisdiction over a Florida resident who wrote a libelous article in a publication which I think was the National Inquirer about an actor in California and articulated the effects test.

And they cite the Fourth Circuit Care First of Maryland. That case is important for a couple of reasons.

First of all in that case, it says that merely posting something on the Internet is an insufficient basis for personal jurisdiction. And that's in the body of the opinion.

The defendant's site is passive. It merely makes information available. The site cannot render him subject to personal jurisdiction in foreign court.

2.5

And what we're looking in Zippo is whether or not the person expressly aimed activity at Virginia.

Counsel cited Young versus New Haven

Advocate, a Fourth Circuit case, very similar facts to this one where a warden in Virginia complained that two New Haven newspapers published articles criticizing him and his activities in the prison in Virginia in connecting newspapers that were also posted on the Internet. And the Court held that the Virginia court could not exercise constitutional jurisdiction because the plaintiffs -- the defendants did not manifest an intent to aim their websites or post their articles at a Virginia audience.

I think that case is dispositive of the motion here. So the Court will grant the motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction on that ground alone.

With respect to the motion to dismiss as it relates to ACT and Mercer, ACT and Mercer have not waived their objection to personal jurisdiction by participating in the General District Court case. That case was appealed, and as I understand Virginia law, when a matter is appealed to Circuit Court then the judgment in General District Court becomes a nullity.

2.5

So they have not waived their right to assert personal jurisdiction. So again the motion is granted as to ACT, Mercer, Miller, Sarner, Rosa and Pignotti.

The ACT contract with Network Solutions concerning a domain name would not be a sufficient basis to exercise personal jurisdiction. And the Christian Science Board versus Nolan case from the Fourth Circuit, again the fact that the server is located here is not enough to pursue personal jurisdiction.

The fact that there is a contract between Network Solutions and the domain name registrant is not a sufficient basis to give jurisdiction -- personal jurisdiction in a dispute involving parties unrelated to the Network Solutions contract.

And I decline to follow the magistrate judge's rulings to the contrary.

With respect to conspiracy, there's not enough here in terms of facts to demonstrate a conspiracy. And again, the fact that the plaintiff here is engaged in group pleading makes it impossible to tell what agreement plaintiff claims was entered into by which defendants at what time to do what against Dr. Federici.

The fact that they all have criticized Dr.
Federici does not mean they've entered into an agreement sufficient to support a claim for conspiracy.

2.5

The defamation claim, there's a motion to dismiss filed by Pignotti and Mercer that does not state a claim for defamation or tortious interference with contract rights or business expectancy.

I'm going to grant that motion for several reasons. First of all, as it relates to the statements themselves, I do not think that plaintiff has set forth sufficient facts connecting Mercer with any actionable statements.

And as it relates to Pignotti, I do not think that plaintiff has set forth sufficient facts to demonstrate a claim that would meet the requirements of libel under Virginia law and the Chapin versus Knight-Ridder case.

The words specifically claimed are not set forth. They're not set forth with any specificity. The dates are not set forth. They're insufficient to state a claim.

And looking at them as a matter of substance, some of them -- Exhibit H, appears to be Dr. Pignotti responding what she believes to be actions taken by Dr. Federici on her website. These matters would not be -- they would be opinion. They would not be sufficient to state a claim for libel.

And I think without making a judgment now that plaintiff's counsel would have to agree that there's a question here to be decided at some point, maybe not today, about whether or not -- what standard would apply to plead a libel or slander against Dr. Federici and whether or not he's a public figure or limited public figure given that he advertises on the Internet and on television and all these others.

But I don't have to decide that now. But if that issue were to come up, it does appear that there would be some challenge presented to Dr. Federici to credibly assert he's not a public figure or at least a limited public figure.

I'm going to grant the motion to dismiss as it relates to tortious interference with contract rights and expectancy because he's not proffered sufficient facts to demonstrate that Mercer or Pignotti intentionally interfered with any contracts.

The fact that he is a practicing psychologist does not in and of itself give notice to anyone else that he has contracts with particular clients or that he communicated with those particular clients.

And the complaint as set forth alleges that two -- I believe it was two potential clients canceled their appointments because of things that they read on the Internet, not necessarily matters that were set forth by Dr. Pignotti or Dr. Mercer.

1
                 And finally, with respect to conspiracy to 2 injure in trade business reputation under 18.2499, this 3 complaint does not come close to meeting the requirements 4 of Ashcroft versus Igbal in terms of setting forth facts 5 that plead conspiracy in more than just conclusory terms.
 6
7
                 So for those reasons, the motion to dismiss will be granted for the reasons just stated.
8
                 Thank you.
                            Thank you, Your Honor.
                 MS. ZECH:
10 Thank you, Your Honor.
                 MS. BAGLEY:
11
                 MR. RIVERA:
                              Thank you, Your Honor.
12
                 THE COURT:
                             It's granted without prejudice, 13 obviously, as it relates to the 12(b)(6) aspects of it.
14
    But the motion to dismiss personal jurisdiction is 15 granted.
16
                 MS. ZECH:
                            Thank you.
17 Thank you.
                 THE COURT:
